As the person I am not I am like a block of wood burning in the fire of your love You incinerate me with the rapid and intense graceful flames of your love You incarcerate me too in the blissful prison of your love Invisible chains of knowing bind me to you who are everything that is A life sentence is not enough I am uplifted and purified by you an ember glowing on its own it fuel consumed soon to be ash Dancing in the graceful lightness of your your love I die over and over to the person I am not
