Post 1:

"Enlightenment is not an experience, nor does it change your experience. Enlightenment just makes whatever experience you have totally acceptable. In other words, though the actual experience (object) does not change, your relationship towards the experience is very different. And it's this relationship of total acceptance and flow that we call the fruit of self-knowledge. That said, enlightenment is both an experience and not an experience."~Non-Doodle

Post 2:

"You are not an experience but the knower of experience. The jiva---the one eyeballing these words---does not know you. Rather, it's YOU, awareness, who knows the experiencing entity---the jiva. But here's the point; You are always free from what you know."~Non-Doodle
