Seeker: Dear Ram, I'm kind of surprised how much Vedanta is taking over my life. ☺ Of course it is a good thing, and I'm happy to go along and not fight it. I do manage to take care of my responsibilities and relationships, but for the most part all I do is listen to you, self-inquire, study the meaning of Sanskrit words, journal, listen to you some more, contemplate the beauty of the self, self-inquire, and listen to you some more. Oh, did I mention I listen to you a lot? ☺

It's just funny that this is the most interesting and fascinating activity for me, and so it has taken over formerly interesting activities, which were really just time-fillers and image-maintainers. I can't believe how attractive Vedanta has become, in the sense that I am attracted to it alone. This is all because of you, Ram, and the fact that I have learned that I can totally trust you, and I can basically let you take over my brain. Your lessons over and over are what I hear inside my head now. I've allowed your Vedanta presentations to just crowd everything else out. It's really kind of a simple way to do it. I guess what surprises me about it is that I never get bored with it; I never want to shut it off and go do something more "worldly." It just keeps getting more and more beautiful.

All my gratitude and appreciation to you, Ramji! It is not just the Vedanta, but it is the vehicle of YOU that makes this possible. Thank you so, so, so much. With all my heart, I love you!
