The Unavoidability of Me [by Nick]

What is real is Self-Aware Consciousness.

Upon inquiry all percepts, concepts and feelings resolve into Awareness.

All “Physical” objects resolve into nothing more than the perception of them which in turn resolves into nothing more than knowing.

There is nothing else.

And really nothing more to say.

Just to know this.

Sundari: Indeed. Good for you, Nick. You are no longer “outside” of the knowledge. You are the knowledge. You can never forget now.

So happy for you,

No Belief in God necessary Anymore

There is only God

You can't miss

Unavoidable Existence

You

Here is a beautiful explanation of another's inquirer's realization of the same thing:

“Is it true to say that ‘my’ existence, my most fundamental experience, i.e. me, is exactly the same existence as that of all ‘other’ things and beings, in the same way that the space contained within each pot is one and the same space? That non-duality HAS to be the nature of existence, that no other option could be possible, because where could you get another existence from? Any possible origin of “other” existences would have to exist themselves at some level, so the origin of everything always comes down to the irreducibility of existence. There is no way we can find any limitation to existence, because nothingness would have to be existent itself to be able to limit existence. ‘No thing’ also IS, which actually means that the nature of reality precludes the possibility of any real nothingness.

“And my ultimate knowledge of this is not merely intellectual, because it all boils down to the irrefutable fact that I exist, and I know I exist. The logic helps me look into my own experience truly as it is as the silly ideas fall away, and see that actually where can I find an end or a beginning to my is-ness?”

~ Much love, Sundari
