Joji: Dear Ram and Sundari, I am on a flight back from South America to Japan.

Tears of happiness are running down my cheeks.

Ramji is my guru. He has dispelled all darkness. No fear is left anymore in the jiva's life.

Tan owes freedom to James. James owes freedom to Chinmaya. Chinmaya owes freedom to Sivananda... and so on and so on until we all owe freedom to Us, the Self.

The self has apparently shrouded itself. The self has apparently freed itself. The self has never done anything. Nothing happened.

There is so much gratitude that I would have offered my body, mind and my senses to Isvara.

I would have offered everything to the world.

But it is not possible. I have never owned anything.

It has always been Isvara's body, mind and senses.

All dreams, feelings, senses, all belonged to him and belong to him.

He who is me only projected the world and the me who is acting out the beautiful story of the universe.
